HAVE SORORITY GIRLS FALLEN FOR RUMORED ORIENTAL CULT?

Police Probe Alleged Hindu Cult In Chicago University Circles—May Be as Big as Doc Hanish's Place —Grand Jury Action Hinted.

Secret information concerning the existence of a Hindu cult in University of Chicago high circles has stirred the police of Woodlawn station to activity.

According to the information now in the hands of the police the cult operates along the lines of the "sun cult" which caused the conviction of Doc Hanish for sending obscene matter through the mail.

As in the case of the Hanish cult it is claimed this present cult is financed by credulous wealthy women, who are lured to the cult by strange Oriental rites.

Detectives have been on the trail of the cult since the arrest of Basudeb Bhattachanga, a young and brilliant Hindu student at the University of Chicago, on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of Ruth Morris, five years old, 6031 Drexel boulevard.

So far no connection between the young Hindu and the alleged cult has been established, but it is thought if
